HE WAS MURDERED.

Frank Clancy Was Struck by a Sand Bag in Toledo.

MYSTERY FOLLOWED UPON MYSTERY.

A Post Mortem Held on the Wrong Body.—Clancy in Search of His Erring Wife.—Sensational Developments in the Case.

Poor Frank Clancy, who died at the Washtenaw county house on Tuesday morning of last week, surrounded only by strangers, unknown and unrecognized in a city where his mother and brother lived, where he had other relatives and many acquaintances, with no one to take enough interest in him to summon medical assistance, was undoubtedly foully murdered.

It was only by chance that his fate ever became known or that his death was ever chronicled, even as that of an unknown. It was only by chance that the Argus first learned of his death last week, and it was not until after his body had been sent to the University that the jail officials became aware of his death, an Argus reporter conveying them that information. The Argus was the first newspaper to put the facts together and to suggest that there had been foul play in the case. The facts of the case, as laid before its readers last week were so pitiful that public sympathy, quick to be aroused, was greatly touched. A coroner's jury was empaneled by Coroner Ball and an official investigation of the death was started Friday. Mystery followed mystery, but the whole case seems now to be in a fair way to be cleared up.

It will be remembered, as told last week, that Frank Clancy was picked up the streets of Toledo, Sunday, August 4, and taken to the station house in a dazed condition. The next morning he was taken to the "Ann Arbor" depot in a patrol wagon and put on board the cars, with a ticket for Ann Arbor. Here he was arrested for being intoxicated, and taken to the jail. It was at once determined that he was not drunk. According to Sheriff Judson he put his hands on his stomach and they thought something was the matter with that. However the jail physician was not summoned but the superintendent of the poor was and poor Clancy was hustled into his carriage and taken at once to the county house, which he reached at half past five o'clock Monday afternoon. No particular attention was paid to him here, as he was at first put down as intoxicated simply because he staggered. He laid on a bench a little while and then he was taken down to the men's sitting room. By this time it was discovered that there was no liquor about him and he was put to bed. He died at a quarter past eight o'clock the next morning, less than fifteen hours after he reached the county house. During his stay there he was continually muttering. Keeper Shankland says the only thing he could understand was to make out once that he wanted a drink of water which was given him, but that he was evidently trying to tell something. The attendant who put him to bed also bears witness to the fact that Clancy evidently tried to tell something, but could make out nothing except once he thought he said Paw Paw and once or twice he thought he heard the word Boyle or Doyle.

When Keeper Shankland went to see him the next morning he saw he was dying and shortly after this he was dead. The body was held the statutory twenty-four hours, washed by one of the attendants and at nine o'clock Wednesday was taken to the University and handed over to the "tender mercies" of gruesome old "Doc" Naegle to be prepared for purposes of dissection.

The attendant who washed the body noticed nothing suspicious about it, though he was not looking for anything. There was a recent bruise or cut on the right shoulder.

The county physician, who had not seen Clancy, made out a death certificate for the University, certifying that he had died of paresis. Through some error the wrong date of death is given in this certificate. The authorities all the way through treated the matter as one of every day occurrence. No inquest was ordered, no post mortem was called. It was sufficient that an unknown man, though evidently not a tramp, had died. No one knew how and no one cared.

Among the receipts found in Clancy's bag was one from Paw Paw. The officials did have the humanity to write to Paw Paw to know if there was a Frank Clancy there. The Paw Paw man telegraphed Mrs. Margaret Clancy, of William street, that her son was lying dead at the county house. The officers began to wake up.

A search was made at the University for the body. William Hasenack, who seems to be a sort of confidential agent for Mrs. Clancy, and who was well acquainted with Frank Clancy, was shown three bodies. He said that neither of them was Clancy. Old Naegle was sure that a certain one of them came from the Washtenaw county house. He knew by the tag. This Hasenack said was not Clancy but he thought it was John Stevens, Clancy's wife's brother. Mrs. Clancy on being shown the body, denied that it was the body of her son.

Coroner Ball empaneled a jury consisting of E. K. Frenau, P. J. Lehman, Fred Huhn, William Eldert, J. H. Ball and S. W. Beakes. They viewed the body which was at once turned over to Drs. Darling and Bourns for a post mortem examination. The seal of secrecy now settled down over the officers and doctors mouths by the orders of Sheriff Judson and Coroner Ball. The mother and all the family were requested not to talk to reporters. But the reporters were continually up with the officers in discoveries and the case was heralded throughout the breadth of the land.

The satchel, papers and clothes accompanying the body were positively recognized by Mrs. Clancy, Hasenack and others as the property of Frank Clancy. John Stevens was supposed to have left Kalamazoo with Clancy to search for Clancy's erring wife. The mystery was how he should turn up in Ann Arbor with Clancy's clothes and satchel. And then where was Clancy? Suspicion at once rested on Clancy's wife and her paramour, Pat Boyle, a Kalamazoo fireman, with whom Mrs. Clancy had recently eloped and who were supposed to be in Toledo.

The doctors went on and made the examination on the supposed Stevens' body and found every organ in the man's body badly diseased. Meantime the newspapers were working on the case. They discovered that John Stevens was a boy of about twenty years of age, and the Kalamazoo dispatches asserted that the body which had been identified as that of Stevens could not be his. Coroner Ball had seen the man at the jail before he was taken to the county house and knew that the man who went to the county house possessed a mustache. The identified body had none. He found that the mustache had not been removed at the University and then went down to the county house where they told him that the body taken to the University had a mustache. It was also found that three bodies had been injected at the University at the same time, the other two coming from the Detroit house of correction. A description was obtained from the Detroit house of correction of the bodies sent and the body on which the post mortem had been held was very accurately described as that of a Texas desperado named Hudgins, who carried several bullets in his body, the location of these wounds being accurately stated.

Coroner Ball and the officers then went to the Anatomical Laboratory again and out of the large vat in which the dead bodies are kept, they quickly drew the body of Frank Clancy. This body was at once recognized by the officers as that of the man who had been so unceremoniously shipped from the jail to the county house. Mrs. Clancy was once more summoned to the gruesome precincts, where the bodies are kept. As soon as she saw the body she cried, "It's Frank! It's my poor boy. Oh, my God, it's my poor Frank!" The birth marks previously described by her were all found. The body was also positively identified by William Hasenack, William Vernon, William Clancy and others.

The mistake was due to carelessness or intention of Gregor Naegle, the aged custodian of the bodies, who has a miserly care for the bodies and who is charged with trying to defeat identification. William Hasenack, who had recognized the body of Hudgins for that of Stevens, claims that he was shown three bodies, that of Hudgins, a negro and an old man, but that the Clancy body was not among the three that he saw.

The body of Frank Clancy was found on Monday, and Monday afternoon the same jury that was sworn in on the body of Hudgins reassembled and were again sworn in over the body of Clancy. The officers had been searching for Boyle and Mrs. Clancy all the time in Toledo without success. All the daily papers were full of the affair, but still nothing was heard from Stevens, Mrs. Clancy or Boyle.

Drs. Darling, Bourns and Hale made a post mortem examination of the remains, but under strict orders of Sheriff Judson were not allowed to divulge the result until Wednesday night. Sheriff Judson, however, told all about it in Toledo Wednesday morning.

Frank Clancy was sandbagged in Toledo, where he was picked up on the streets in a dazed condition Sunday, August 4. The doctors examination developed three clots of blood at the base of the brain. The blood in these clots, they determined, could only have been poured out during life. The skull was not fractured and the doctors determined that a blow had evidently been struck with a sandbag or some other heavy but yielding substance at the back of the head.

The scene of action was now transferred to Toledo, where on Wednesday morning Patrick Boyle was arrested. His discovery was a neat little bit of work on the part of a reporter of the Kalamazoo Telegraph, after the police had been unable to find trace of him in Toledo.

To give our readers a clear understanding of the case it may be well at this point to go back and state who the parties whose names have been mentioned are and their relation to each other.

Frank Clancy was a roofer by trade and lived in Kalamazoo. He had been left considerable property by his father, which he had gone through, some claim through his wife's help. He worked at

THEY GO TO BOSTON.

The Hundred Knights and Friends Who Take the Pilgrimage.

ALMOST SUFFOCATED BY GAS IN JAIL.

An Insane Prisoner Turns on the Gas.—A Chance to Secure a Big Factory.—The Big Lateral Sewer Tax and the Reason For it.

The Knightly Pilgrimage.

Ann Arbor Commandery, No. 13, K. T., leaves by special train next Thursday noon to attend the triennial convocation of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of the United States, which is to be held at Boston, August 26 to 30. The members of the local commandery have been making great preparations for the pilgrimage and contemplate one of the pleasantest ones yet made by them. As a commandery and with a representative number of their members present, Ann Arbor Commandery has attended the triennial convocations held at St. Louis in 1886, at Washington in 1889, and at Denver in 1892, and these pilgrimages were so enjoyable to all those who participated in them that none of those who went then will miss the pilgrimage to Boston if they can help it.

A number of the members of the commandery will be accompanied by their wives and daughters and some fifteen or twenty friends of the members who do not belong to the order, will also go on the trip with the knights.

The committee having in charge the arrangement for the trip and the entertainment while there have perfected all the details and provided for a pleasant and enjoyable trip throughout. The city of Ann Arbor and another new hotel car belonging to William Mershon, of Saginaw have been engaged and will be occupied by the Ypsilanti contingent of the commandery, who will make a pleasure trip after the close of the convocation. Besides these two cars the committee has chartered two elegant Wagner sleepers for the use of the balance of the party. All these cars are filled with the exception of about half a dozen berths and these will be filled before the party leaves. The four palace cars and a baggage car will compose the special train that will leave the T. and A. depot on Thursday next at noon on the outward trip.

The route chosen is one of the best scenic routes in this country. The commandery leaving at 12 o'clock noon by the Ann Arbor road takes the Grand Trunk for Port Huron, passes through the long tunnel and Canada reaches Kingston about three o'clock Friday morning. Here the choice of two routes is given to Montreal—those desiring taking a magnificent steamer and enjoying a day's ride down the beautiful St. Lawrence, "shoot" the Lachine Rapids and arrive at Montreal about six o'clock in the evening, while those who do not desire the boat ride will continue with the train and arrive at Montreal before noon. The train will depart about midnight for Quebec and Saturday will be spent in this historic town. At seven o'clock Saturday evening the train will again be boarded and will arrive in the White Mountains about daylight on Sunday giving the party a chance to view the wonderful scenery of this part of the trip when it is at its best. A stop of a couple of hours will be made at Gorham, N. H., at the base of the mountains after which the trip will be continued, the train arriving at Portland, Me., between ten and eleven o'clock. Here a stay of about three hours will be made to enable the visitors to take in the sights, after which they will go to the finest summer resort on the entire coast, Old Orchard Beach, Me. A rest will be made here all Sunday afternoon and night giving everybody a chance to take a dip in "Old Ocean." At seven o'clock Monday morning the journey will be continued, the arrival in Boston being scheduled for ten o'clock.

Arrangements have been made all along the route for stops for meals, but the party will not be at the mercy of anybody for something to eat. The Ypsilanti contingent will take all of their meals in their cars, two cooks and several waiters accompanying them. The committee has made arrangements for serving hot coffee and tea en route, and those who start out with a well filled lunch basket, a cup and a teaspoon will be able to get along pretty well and be able to put in the stops at sight seeing. Thomas Taylor and Al Shetterly accompany the party to look after the baggage and care for the wants of the party.

At Boston an elegant house, 701-703 Massachusetts avenue, has been secured and headquarters will be established there immediately on the arrival of the party. The houses will provide sleeping apartments comfortably for a hundred persons, and breakfast will be served in the house. For headquarters room the commandery has two large suites of parlors on the lower floors, and here open house will be kept for the members and their friends. On Wednesday evening a reception will be given for which invitations are now being sent out to different commanderies that will be there.

Below is given a list of the members and their friends who will accompany the commandery on the trip, besides which several members will leave later in the week and meet the party at Boston.

A. C. Nichols and wife, L. C. Goodrich and wife, W. W. Watts and wife, W. B. Smith and wife, O. M. Martin and wife, E. H. Eberbach and wife, L. H. Clement and wife, Elmer E. Beal and wife, N. D. Gates and wife, Fred H. Belser and wife, Miss Emma Hayley and Mrs. Davis, John R. Miner, Charles E. Hisecock, Al. Shetterly, John H. Cutting, Pusey W. Moore, Dr. J. W. Morton, George H. Blum, E. V. Hangsterfer, Ross Granger, Eugene Koch, Herman F. Miller, I. B. Bent, Thomas Taylor, and J. F. Hoelzle of Ann Arbor; W. H. Sweet and wife, P. W. Carpenter and wife, Mrs. S. J. Ellenwood, George W. Albans and wife, F. W. Glanfield and wife, James Bemis and wife, M. M. Read and wife, S. A. Rogers and wife, Lydia Campaign, Tracy L. Townner and mother, Mattie Hubbell, C. L. Stevens, wife and daughter, D. E. Wilbur and wife, Fred Lamb and wife, W. L. Kishler, J. D. Colvan, W. L. Pack, and Charles E. Samson, of Ypsilanti; Martin Cremer, of Ithaca, N. Y., H. S. Holmes and wife, Dr. George W. Palmer of Chelsea; A. F. Freeman and wife, Joseph Goodyear, of Manchester; Dr. Harry A. Nichols, Saline; John Cook, Urania; W. H. Whitmarsh, wife and daughter, of Milan; Rev. M. H. Bartram, of Dearborn; Charles Lamb, of Charlotte; James L. Stone, Rushville, Ind.; Wallace G. Palmer, Detroit; Frank M. Lansing, O. L. Davis and Dr. W. J. Mills, Howell.

Sudden Death on the Street.

Mrs. Mary Flynn, widow of the late Michael Flynn, dropped dead on Detroit street, near the Beakes street bridge, last Friday afternoon. She was attacked with a violent hemorrhage of the lungs and walked a short distance before she dropped. She was past seventy years of age. The funeral was held Sunday and her remains were laid at rest in St. Patrick's cemetery, Northfield.

Almost a Tragedy.

There came near being a scene in another tragedy at the Washtenaw county jail last Wednesday afternoon. The insane boy picked up at Milan, who imagines that he is a steam engine, is confined there awaiting an opening at Pontiac. He is in the upper rooms, of which he had the run. Wednesday afternoon he evidently undertook to turn himself into a gas engine, as he shut down all the windows and turned on all the gas. When officer Wood went up stairs he found the boy unconscious. Dr. Clark was immediately summoned and after a visit of half an hour had the young fellow all right again.

A Big Lateral Sewer Tax.

The lateral sewer tax for District No. 3, or the Hill street district will be a heavy one. It is fixed at $36.18 on a $1,000 valuation, while District No. 4, or the Huron street district will pay a tax of $15.95 per $1,000 valuation. The wide difference in the rates of taxation is caused by the fact that the Huron street lateral runs entirely through valuable property, while the Hill street sewer runs through considerable property of small valuation. It costs just as much to build a sewer in front of property of low valuation at it does in front of property of high valuation. Consequently the sewer tax rate in the Hill street district is a very high one. So that if you own any valuable lots in that district you will have to sweat for it.

Securing a Big Factory.

Ann Arbor should not miss the opportunity of securing a good factory which will employ a hundred hands by the first of January. It is no experiment that our citizens will embark in if they secure the location of the proposed factory here, as it is a well established business, advertised in every magazine of prominence in the country, with more orders ahead than it can fill, and a money making institution. Now is the time for Ann Arbor citizens to take hold and secure the location here of the Ypsilanti underwear factory.

It is through J. D. Ryan and Fred McOmber that the opportunity was discovered. In a conversation with J. B. Colvan, president of the Hay & Todd Mfg. Co., manufacturers of the celebrated Ypsilanti underwear, it was learned that the company had reached their limit in Ypsilanti and that they had failed to take a $36,000 order for next year because they were unable to fill it. They have had overtures from several large cities to remove their entire factory, but prefer to remain in the smaller cities, if they could be sure of plenty of hands. Mr. Ryan suggested Ann Arbor and Mr. Colvan thought favorably of the idea as they could then keep up their Ypsilanti factory and do business for both factories from one office. The outcome of the conversation was that if Ann Arbor would furnish a suitable building, they would put 100 knitting machines at work here before January 1st. Such a building and grounds would cost about $5,000.

As this would give employment to from 100 to 125 hands at the start and as the business is a well established and paying one, it is, in the opinion of the Argus, the best proposition to secure manufacturing for this city that has ever been made this city. It should be accepted at once as it would add materially to the prosperity of this city.

Harry Twig, of near Milan, had an unpleasant experience recently with a runaway team. While engaged in hauling water his horses became frightened and ran away, throwing him out and one wheel passed over his head. That was a "hard head," however, and with a few stitches and the passing of a few days was as good as new.

ADRIAN PRESS WASHTENAWISMS.

The readers of the Ann Arbor Argus lose nothing by the discontinuance of the Tuesday edition. Friday's weekly more than compensates for the change.

The result of the attack on Ann Arbor by the Salvation Army was quite a surprise to all concerned. Each side appears to have misunderstood the other's strength. Both sides are in council.

"The Devil up to Date" is the title of an article in Scribner. It might be thought to refer to the liquor-phobia at Clayton or Ypsilanti, but nowhere in the article are those places mentioned.

Ald. Vroman, of Ypsilanti, mops gigantic beads of sweat from his brow and exclaims, "I wouldn't be mayor for anything!" No, nor we either. It's a great "horse" on a man and often a night mare.

It cost two Ann Arbor boys jointly $82.48 to chase boats containing ladies off the water at Whitmore lake, the chasers being clad only in hats and the Parisian costume worn in Eden before the transgression.

Mr. Wisdom resides at Milan. Members of the Folly family can be found in most all towns.

Daniel Scofield, of Ypsilanti sat on the porch to see it rain, when lightning struck a tree eight feet from him and jumped down an old well. Scofield dodged and saved himself, and undoubtedly has a great future, barring setbacks.

The hay scales over which there was as much wrangling in the council as a tariff bill in congress, are being put in by Oscar Steffy in front of his new place.—Washtenaw Times. Couldn't do a little business on a big scale without a wrangle, hay?

Little Johnny Ritz, of Ann Arbor, peered into the barrel of a child's rifle to see how it looked inside, but owing to a severe scalp wound he received at just about that time he has no distinct remembrance of how it did look.

At Chelsea yesterday there was a gathering of the tribes of Washtenaw. The young braves engaged in bicycle and foot races. The horse race and the human race also formed interesting features of the day.

The officer who served the warrants in the Ypsilanti liquor cases runs a "soft drink" shop and is now under a boycott from the saloon keepers and their friends. If a boycott of the soft drinkeries of Hillsdale and Branch were strictly enforced these counties would be tetotally dry.

Solomon Dorr, of Diamondale, fell from a haystack on his head, and it made him so mad that he tried to kill his wife and children, and was sent to an asylum.

The recent exciting chess contest between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti developed the most consummate skill on the part of the participants—in prevaricating about the result.

"There seems to be a rage among dairymen for dehorning cattle," says the Ypsilantian. It struck Washtenaw too late to save the Willis poet from the horns of the bullema.

Ypsilanti has quieted down for a brief respite from the strain of the liquor excitement, and settles back to the comfortable exhaustion of a relieved patient after an all night with cholera morbus.

Apples are very scarce in these parts. A great many trees have not more than two or three apples on and more haven't any. Corn and late potatoes are in a very flourishing condition. There are very few beans in this vicinity. Those that planted have but a very few, with some exceptions; once in a while you find a good field. The beans that were planted before the drouth have come up nicely since the recent rains, and it's the same with sowed corn.

A cyclone in the shape of prohibition words were blown from the mouth of Hon. M. V. B. Bennett, of Kansas, Friday afternoon, all over Mr. Hicks' grove. The orator was an able speaker, handled his subject well when he talked on the prohibition track, but he forgot himself and cloth far enough to be abusive and personal. When he slung mud at the G. O. P. that was expected and was part of his thunder, but to call out a single person in the audience and abuse him was disgusting to any refined audience, and we are sorry to have to say that this was done to quite an extent; and if it failed to hurt the cause in a political sense it certainly marked the speaker as being ungentlemanly and rude.

His Occupation.

The street car was crowded, and as it turned a corner sharply a man who was standing in the aisle made a grab at a strap, but missed it and involuntarily embraced a sharp faced young woman standing near him.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," he said.

"Sir," she exclaimed, "you are a boor."

"No, madam," rejoined the penitent offender, "I am not. I am a newspaper man."

"You are, hey?" was the contemptuous rejoinder. "What do you do about a newspaper office, I'd like to know?"

"I am the pressman."

The sharp faced young woman turned a little redder, but she didn't say anything more.—Chicago Tribune.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back, and also that his bladder was affected. He tried many so called kidney cures, but without any good result. About a year ago he began the use of Electric Bitters and found relief at once. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to the cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c. for large bottle. ### Mouth Dyspepsia.

A writer in Modern Medicine asserts that "mouth dyspepsia is coming to be a very common disorder. It has further," he says, "been repeatedly demonstrated that a decayed tooth is frequently the starting point of a pyemic process, and it has also been shown that tubercular and other disease germs may find entrance to the body through cavities in decaying teeth. It must not be forgotten also that these cavities are the favorite habitat of many pathogenic microbes, which, feeding upon particles of retained food, speedily develop and through increase in number acquire the ability to overcome the resistance of the body."

The Wrong Boy.

An amusing tale of a phrenologist's mistake is credited to John Burroughs, the author and horticulturist. "Here's a boy," said the professor in examining the head of the youthful Burroughs, "who will amass great wealth. All his ideas will be of money and money making. He will be immensely rich and a power in that line." "The trouble was," says Mr. Burroughs, "that he struck the wrong boy. It's a pity he hadn't gone in the next door and got hold of the boy there, for that boy was Jay Gould. We used to go to school together."—Philadelphia Press.

A Weather Perch.

Farmer Dunn, the weather prophet, has a very cool place during the warm season, his office being 365 feet above the sidewalk. At such a height the brisk breezes from the ocean render summer very tolerable, but during the keen blasts of winter this elevation is far from enviable. Farmer Dunn was for 24 years at the summit of the Equitable building, which he only left for the loftier Manhattan. We used to think Trinity church very tall, but Farmer Dunn is nearly 70 feet above the gilt cross which crowns the sphere.—New York Letter.

ON THE MOUNTAIN.

A storm from the mountain is coming,
With lightning and thunder and rain;
The wind is sweeping and humming
In the butternut trees on the plain.

The cloud is ebon that follows,
The fore cloud is livid and pale,
There's the flash and the tossing of swallows
In the van of the eddying gale.

And the rain is awake on the mountain:
'Tis lashing the forest afar
With fall of a shattering fountain
And the tramp and the tumult of war;

With the drums of the detoning thunder,
And the clang in the bugles of wind,
With the gongs and the tortured saunder
By the rush of the host from behind.

The plains are leaping with shadows,
The highlands go out like a blot,
And over the eddying meadows
The rain is hurled like shot.

The darkness is glooming and brightening,
There is alternate chaos and form,
With the parry and thrust of the lightning
In the turbulent heart of the storm.

Now the storm is over,
And the greener plain
Seems to glow and hover
Through the thinning rain.

Now the wind is gusty
In the maple tops,
Striking out the lusty
Storms of gleaming drops.

Now the goldfinch whistles
In his spattered vest,
Balanced on the thistles,
Bolder than the best.

And the hermit thrushes,
On the sparkling hills,
Link the dripping hushes
With their silver thrills.

—Duncan C. Scott in Youth's Companion.

FRIENDLY.

Annabel had many friends among men. "What cant it is to say friendship between man and woman is impossible!" she would cry, with flashing eyes. "What degrading cant!" with a flushing cheek. She liked the society of men. They gave her a new outlook on life. She would enjoy it if they confided their love affairs to her. So she said. Somehow they had not as yet given her that enjoyment. She was 22, with a piquant face and figure and a man of the world style of conversation that half veiled an unfathomable innocence.

It was a hot evening early in June, and one of Annabel's friends had dropped in. They were sitting together in the miniature veranda, discussing a subject they had often discussed before.

"One comfort about my man to man style of friendship," said Annabel, "one great comfort, is that one needn't be eternally bothering about one's looks and that sort of thing, when one wants to have a rational conversation. I don't know anything more aggravating than to talk one's best talk to a man, as I did out at dinner the other day, and to find him obviously speculating as to whether one's hair's all one's own. Now, I don't think you or any other of my special chums would even notice if I wore a sack when you came to see me. That's so refreshing."

"It is," said the friend. "For instance, some girls would be dreadfully put out if their shoe had a little hole in it, just at the tip, when a man was there. But you?"

"Where?" and Annabel jumped off her lounge chair with one bound and passed her pretty feet under agonized inspection. For one with whom appearance was "no object" she was wonderfully shod.

"I'm so sorry," said her friend. "I didn't mean to imply that you had a hole in your shoe. Only that if you had it wouldn't trouble you in the least."

"But it would," said Annabel, with dignity. "I never said one would care to exhibit slovenliness to one's friends. And a hole would be slovenly."

They smoked in silence.

"How do you define a man's friendship for a woman?" he inquired, after the pause had lasted a long while.

Annabel took her time before answering.

"I think," she replied at last rather slowly, "it means having her interests at heart so much that they could never bore you—so that her pain or happiness would always be to you almost more than your own. You would never hear her lightly spoken of. You would save her all you could. You would let nothing of hers be injured. Where you could you would put velvet between her and the rough things of the world, as Carlyle said."

"Yes, but he spoke of his wife."

Annabel did not seem to hear the words. She was looking over the roofs, the appallingly uniform roofs of West Kensington, to where a golden haze hung in the sky and wonderful dream music was being played and then blown into the balcony on a little soft June breeze. The gold sky was the light of the great dusty exhibition, full of rowdy Whitesun revelers, and the music was blaring from a brass band. But distance and the summer and the quiet hour caught it all up and left nothing of it but what was beautiful. It made Annabel feel restless.

"I'm going in," she said suddenly, springing to her feet. "Here goes for lighting the lamp." And she whisked into her little drawing room with a movement anything but dreamy.

Her friend followed resignedly, though he had been very comfortable where he was. He was quite used to Annabel's frequent changes of mood, and by indulging in no such himself he was often able to tire her out and to get down to the forlorn little entity behind the many poses.

The lamp was a high concern on bamboo poles and quite beyond the reach of Annabel's 5 feet of height. She got a low chair and prepared to climb upon it.

"One moment," said her companion gravely. "We have decided that it is right to protect all that belongs to our friend. Now, this chair belongs to mine, and will be more or less injured by being stood upon, even by her. Therefore"—and he lifted her up.

After one furious and unavailing twitch Annabel settled to the situation with surprising ease. She lit the lamp and adjusted its red shade and said

"Thank you" with great demureness when he set her down.

They got themselves into two armchairs, but she seemed to find conversation something of an effort.

"Friendship has many advantages over—the other thing," he said at last.

"Yes?"

"Yes. It has far less obligation about it. Now, one takes an interest in one's friend's work. How's it getting on, by the way?"

"Oh, much as usual," said Annabel. "But one doesn't feel it weighing on one's mind that she should have to work at all. Now, with one's sweetheart how different! She should sit all day in silk attire and cross her little hands in her lap if she liked. The wind should not be allowed to blow too roughly on her. Ridiculous, wouldn't it be?"

"Degrading," said Annabel stoutly.

"Just so. Degrading. Then there's that absurd notion that women want taking care of. With one's friend the fiction doesn't have to be kept up. She goes alone to theaters and meets one at the door, and there's no nonsense about having to see her home. She takes her own bus and off she goes. Now, if she were—not one's friend, she shouldn't go one step by herself. There would always be a tedious male creature at her side elbowing off the passersby and taking every unnecessary care of her. Sounds oppressive, doesn't it?"

"Yes," said Annabel. A little wistfulness had crept into her voice and some of the sturdiness had faded.

"Then there's not that terrible demand for sympathy. One expects one's friend to fit in with one's own particular mood, just as one picks up a book that chimes in with it. If she doesn't happen to suit one day, off one goes. It isn't necessarily on one's mind that she may be in trouble of her own, or, if she is, she can say so. There's no need for the 'I will die ere she shall grieve' business."

He hummed the words with a ludicrous exaggeration. Annabel shrank a little. She ridiculed sentiment in public and cherished it as deeply in her heart as every other clever little feminine fool in the world.

"Now, with one's sweetheart," he said, watching her, "one can tell she is sad while she is still smiling her welcome. One knows every little trick of expression—almost every thought behind the curls. There's no going off then without comforting. Out it must all come, and she must be petted into happiness again. Doesn't it sound queer?"

No answer from Annabel. The band at the exhibition was playing a particularly vulgar comic song. It came in at the window softened to a melody straight from paradise.

He thought he heard a little sigh. He came and leaned over the back of her chair.

"The mutual society, help and comfort the one ought to have of the other, both in prosperity and adversity," he said, speaking low. "How does that sound, Annabel?"

No answer.

He knelt down by her chair and got hold of both her hot, small hands.

"How does that sound—my dear?"

"It sounds sweet," she said in a voice that was only a breath. But he heard.

"Is it as sweet as it sounds?" he asked.

That was long after, however.—New Budget.

The Circular Saw.

A correspondent states that the circular saw was first invented in America by a combmaker named Hartshorn, who used a common handsaw to saw out the horn between the teeth, thus forming one of those old fashioned horn combs.

Finally, thinking it rather a slow process, he took what used to be called a "bungtown copper," filed it down thinner, drilled a hole through its center, then squared the hole and cut the teeth around its outer edge, placed it upon a mandrel true and permanent, then put it into his lathe, and with the flat horn lying upon a wooden rest he sawed out his combs.

From the copper he shortly cut up his backsaw and converted it into circular saws. This man, Hartshorn, lived and died in Mansfield, Conn. He also invented the screw and lip auger, also the bits, such as are used in the brace.

He was asked why he did not put in his claim for compensation long afterward, when we had a patent office.

His reply was that if he had done anything that was a benefit to his fellow men they were welcome to it.—Philadelphia Record.

All Doubt Removed.

Any doubt that may have hitherto existed as to the veracity of the Biblical account of the passage of the Jews dryshod across the Red sea have been set at rest by the report of Major General Talloch, published in London, describing an incident which took place during his recent survey for the British government of that part of Egypt through which the route of the exodus is said to have lain.

It seems that on one occasion last spring there sprang up a storm of wind so intense in its violence as not only to stop all survey work along the borders of Lake Menzaleh, but to carry within the space of a few hours the entire waters, the lake out of sight beyond the horizon, leaving all the sailing vessels resting on the sandy bed of the inland sea. This is manifestly what occurred in the days of Moses, and what has hitherto been in the eyes of the skeptical open to doubt as a miracle must henceforth be accepted as a definitely proved natural fact.—New York Tribune.

How She Knew.

"Mrs. Smith's got a dog that likes me," said little Emily, coming home from a visit to her aunt.

"How do you know he likes you?" her mother asked.

"Cause he tasted me and then wagged his tail," answered the little girl.—Pearson's Weekly.

HOTEL READING ROOMS.

Their Principal Patrons in New York People Not Guests at the Hotel.

In one respect at least New York differs from all other American cities, and that is in regard to the importance of the reading rooms of its hotels. There are in New York 229 hotels, exclusive of apartment houses with restaurant attachments. Every hotel in New York or elsewhere—every genuine hotel, that is—has a reading room, and in it are to be seen gathered the most important accessories of a hotel—the newsstand, the telegraph office, the telephone office and the railroad and steamboat ticket office. In a country hotel the reading room is the seat of great activity, and it seems to be the bounden duty of the transient male patrons of the hotel, as well as the regular male boarders, to be in the reading room as long a time as possible between meals, and usually a late comer is obliged to wait his turn for a seat at one of the writing desks or tables or for a chance to read one of the newspapers which are kept on file.

According to the observations of all hotel men throughout the country, the smaller the town the more important the hotel reading room; the larger the town the less important the hotel reading room. It is apparently in corroboration of this rule that the reading rooms of most New York hotels, though furnished in attractive style and well calculated to serve the convenience of guests, are usually deserted, or if not deserted are patronized chiefly by persons not guests of the hotel. In other words, men not stopping at the hotel, but meeting friends in its main corridor, utilize the conveniences of the reading room. Added to these are a few of the transient guests, who for the most part come to New York on business or pleasure from great distances, and especially from interior towns. Boston men, Philadelphia men, Baltimore men and Buffalo men are not great patrons of the reading rooms of New York hotels, but transient guests from the small towns of the country are, and some of them sit for hours at a time conning the back numbers of newspapers or writing mechanically and then nervously destroying letters to friends and relations.

The paradoxical thing about hotel reading rooms in New York is that though ostensibly maintained for the use and convenience of the hotel guests they are at the service in nearly every case of persons who are not only not guests of the hotel, but who, furthermore, are resident New Yorkers. Nearly every hotel in the city has a large number of patrons who are known as "regulars," who stay for several months at a time, and who are seen very little in the hotel corridors or in the reading room. Occasionally a patron of a New York hotel, perhaps one of its oldest guests, will find it necessary to write a letter or to consult a newspaper file, and when he does he is usually compelled to wait until an outside person not a guest is ready to take his departure.—New York Sun.

The Grip.

An experience with this disease during all its past epidemics, warrants the bold claim that Dr. King's New Discovery will positively cure each and every case if taken in time, and the patient takes the ordinary care to avoid exposure. Another thing has been proven, that those who have used Dr. King's New Discovery escape the many troubles after results of this disease. By all means get a bottle and try it. It is guaranteed, and money will be refunded if no good results follow its use. Sold at Eberbach Drug & Chemical Co.'s drug store, Ann Arbor, and at Geo. J. Haussler's drug store, Manchester.

Saved by an Elk.

A curious story of adventure comes from Montana. While a freight train was lying over at a small mountain station the engineer borrowed a shotgun and started out for a hunt. He was about returning to his train when a cow made her appearance. Before he realized that there was any danger the animal made a rush at him, and he ran with all his speed. But the cow was a better racer, and in a few minutes caught him by his clothing, splitting his coat from waist to collar and tossing him into the air. Getting to his feet as quickly as possible, he dodged behind a tree, and then to his dismay found that the gun barrel was bent so as to be useless.

The next ten minutes were very lively ones. The cow chased the engineer round and round the tree, and when he got a chance to hit her with the gun barrel it only seemed to enrage her more. It was only a question of time when he would succumb to fatigue, but a diversion occurred that saved his life.

An angry snort was heard, and a big elk appeared upon the scene, head down and prepared for a fight. The cow was so mad by this time that she was ready for anything, and in another moment the two animals dashed at each other.

The engineer watched the combat for a few minutes until prudence suggested that he should make a retreat while he could. He regained the train in safety and never knew the outcome of the battle, but the presumption is that the elk was the victor.—Exchange.

Coming Gun Seems To Be the Rifle.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—There has been received at the navy department a sample of steel three-fourths of an inch in thickness which had been pierced by a rifle bullet of a caliber less than that of the present army rifle, or about .30. The sample is interesting in that it shows that the torpedo boats may be rendered useless by good shots from such rifles. The distance at which the steel sample was pierced was about 200 feet.

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nerve.

A few years ago, Mr. L. W. Gallaher, was an extensive, successful expert manufacturer of lumber products. Attacked with epilepsy, he was obliged to give up his business. The attacks came upon him most inopportunely. One time falling from a carriage, at another down stairs, and often in the street. Once he fell down a shaft in the mill, his injuries nearly proving fatal. Mr. Gallaher writes from Milwaukee, Feb. 10, '95.

"There are none more miserable than epileptics. For 20 years I suffered with epileptic fits, having as high as five in one night. I tried any number of physicians, paying to one alone, a fee of $500.00 and have done little for years but search for something to help me, and have taken all the leading remedies, but received no benefit. A year ago my son, Chas. S. Gallaher, druggist at 191 Reed St., Milwaukee, gave me Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve, and I tried it with gratifying results. Have had but two fits since I began taking it. I am better now in every way than I have been in 20 years."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by druggists on a positive guarantee that the first bottle will benefit or price refunded. Book on the Heart and Nerves, free. Address, Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 16, 1895.

Little more than a month ago the liberal ministry in England resigned, the opposition took office and ordered an election for a new house of commons. Since that time the issues of the opposing parties have been formulated, a campaign on those issues conducted, elections held, the will of the people ascertained and the new parliament is now ready to carry that will into legislation. What a contrast this with our long drawn out, business disturbing campaigns of from four to six months, and the subsequent thirteen months of delay before congress comes together to consider the issues on which it was elected, many of which may in the meantime have become obsolete, or, in view of possible change of conditions, of little consequence. Perhaps it was necessary in earlier years when there were no railroads and telegraphs and but few newspapers to have a long campaign. It may be necessary now, in view of the multiplicity of questions submitted to our electors to take a longer time to instruct and enlighten them than is required in England where electors are required to vote for members of the house of commons only; but surely there can be no necessity for holding conventions and nominating candidates several months before the time set for the polling. The great mass of voters are kept in pretty close touch with the questions which are pressing for solution by the newspapers and other periodicals, and do not require so long a time to arrive at an understanding of the issues on which their will is to be expressed. Then there are positive disadvantages in long campaigns. Attention is taken from business and time and energy spent in the excitement of campaigning without necessity therefor or adequate advantage. Business is interrupted and immense losses result. Large amounts of money are expended in carrying on these protracted campaigns, if not in the corrupting of voters, which might be devoted to worthier objects. The burdens of the campaign are often so great upon the candidates that they consider it necessary to use their office to reimburse themselves for "legitimate expenses" incurred by engaging in questionable practices and thus their time instead of being given to the performance of their duties to their constituents, is occupied in rehabilitating their private fortunes. Shorter campaigns would avoid much of this expense and a considerable part of the corrupting influence resulting from the expenditure of enormous campaign funds. Business would suffer less and every electoral interest would be equally well cared for. We might learn a valuable lesson from the methods of campaigning across the water.

In many respects the recent encampment of the Michigan National Guard seems to have been the most successful in years. The real purpose for which the state makes a considerable annual expenditure—the acquainting of our citizen soldiery with the actual duties and discipline of life in the field—was never more prominently kept before the men. The basis of all efficiency in a military organization is discipline and drill—thorough understanding of the requirements of the service. Nothing will do more either to preserve the confidence and faith of the people of our fair state in the citizen soldiers than to see them respond in soldierly fashion to the proper demands of the service. Michigan has had reason to be proud of her militia and is never indifferent to its merits. The ease with which it was converted into veteran soldiers in the late war and the record then made has disarmed criticism for all time. In view of the general success of the encampment it is to be regretted that anything should have occurred to make the memory of the same in any degree unsatisfactory. That any should have felt that there was a possible unnecessary display of authority on the part of any officers is unfortunate. The militia, being in large measure a voluntary organization, every display of authority not necessary for the efficiency of the service should be avoided lest it tend to make the system unpopular and discourage men from enlisting. The militia is a necessary arm of the government and those who are willing to enter it should be given no cause to consider themselves unjustly treated.

It is estimated that farmers and horse breeders during the past three years have lost in horse values about $424,000. This has been due to various causes, prominent among which may be mentioned the trolley and the bicycle. During the time mentioned $400,000-000 have been expended in constructing and equipping electric railways. This has thrown out of use in each of the large cities from 7,000 to 10,000 horses and stopped the purchase of horses to take their places. The bicycle has also in a considerable degree superseded the horse for light driving and is destined to become still more important as a mode of conveyance in time to come. In 1890 the horses on our farms and ranches numbered 14,000,000 and they were worth $987,000,000. In 1892 the number had increased to 15,500,000 and their value to $1,000,000,000. In 1895 the number had increased to 15,893,318, but their value had fallen off to $576,730,580. There are no present indications of a restoration of horse values in the near future.

Comptroller Bowler of the United States treasury has reopened the question of the constitutionality of the sugar bounty clause of the McKinley tariff act by refusing to pay the claims for bounty on sugar manufactured during the season of 1893. The refusal of the comptroller to settle certain claims amounting to $238,000 was sustained by Secretary Carlisle on July 23. The United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia has held that the act granting a bounty on sugar was unconstitutional and on this decision is based the refusal of the comptroller to pay the claims. The last congress appropriated $5,500,000 for the payment of all claims which might arise under the provisions of the McKinley act, while it was in force, but of course if the bounty provision is unconstitutional the claims ought not to be allowed. The principle of government favoritism to one industry at the expense of all others, through a bounty, is odious to our ideas of equality of opportunity and privilege before the law, and hence these claims should not be paid at least until the question of constitutionality is settled by the court of last resort.

Associate Justice Howell E. Jackson of the United States supreme court, died on the 8th instant, of consumption. Judge Jackson was well known in Michigan, he having been judge of the circuit of which Michigan forms a part before he was elevated to the supreme bench. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him both as a man and a jurist. He was a scholarly man and a man of wide experience in affairs. He had served his state in various capacities, and was a member of the United States senate when appointed to the circuit bench by President Cleveland. He was made associate justice by President Harrison. He has been in failing health for some time and his last appearance on the bench was on the occasion of the second hearing of the income tax question. The vacancy on the supreme bench caused by his death is the fourth which President Cleveland has been called upon to fill.

An elevated bicycle road is to be constructed between Chicago and Milwaukee. The road contemplated is a wooden elevated road sixteen feet wide, extending in nearly a straight line between the two cities and terminating as near the business center of each as possible. A company has been formed in Chicago with a capital of a million dollars, the stock has all been subscribed, plans prepared and work on the road will begin as soon as the right of way has been secured. It is to be a toll road, ten cents being the charge between the two cities. It is thought that 20,000 wheelmen per week will use it.

At last it is said that the famous Mora claim against Spain is to be settled by the payment by that country of $1,500,000. This claim originated years ago in the act of the Spanish government confiscating the estates of one Mora, a naturalized citizen of the United States during a rebellion in Cuba. The Spanish government long since recognized the justice of the claim, but failed to make provisions for its payment. Recently Secretary of State Olney has been pushing the claim with the result stated above.

HE WAS MURDERED.

his trade now and then as he found work, but had very limited means. He is the son of Mrs. Margaret Clancy, of William street, in this city. Seven years ago he married Edith Stevens, of White Pigeon. They lived in Paw Paw, St. Joseph, Kalamazoo and White Pigeon. Three children were born to them. Frank Clancy was arrested a year ago on the complaint of his wife for non support, and the neighbors siding in with her, he was sent to jail for thirty days. Mrs. Clancy claimed that he drank heavily and when drunk had frequently abused her most severely. On the other hand William Vernon who knew Clancy well and is a most reputable witness, says that Clancy was not a hard drinker, but was an inveterate cigarette fiend. Hasenack and others deny Mrs. Clancy's story about his being an habitual drunkard.

Mrs. Edith Clancy was a dressmaker by trade and an excellent one, too. She is the daughter of Dr. Stevens, who died many years ago at White Pigeon. Old residents of White Pigeon inform the Argus that while they never knew anything against the Stevens girls, they were always at the depots when the trains went through to talk to the trainmen.

The Clancys have not lived together for some time. Several weeks ago Patrick Boyle, a Kalamazoo fireman, left his wife and went to Toledo, putting up at the Empire hotel under the name of James Dillon, and engaging board for his wife and child, whom he said would soon join him. Shortly after this Mrs. Edith Clancy and two of her children turned up in Toledo and joined Boyle, where Mrs. Clancy passed off for his wife. Here shortly afterwards they were joined by John Stevens, a brother of Mrs. Clancy, who had lived with her for some years. About two weeks ago Stevens took his sister and her children and went to Windsor, Canada. This date is not definitely fixed, but is the date given by Boyle as the time of their leaving. In Windsor Mrs. Clancy went by the name of Mrs. Kennedy and stated that her husband would soon join her. According to Sheriff Judson, Boyle who in Windsor passed for Kennedy, arrived in Windsor from Toledo Sunday morning, August 4, and returned that night to Toledo. This was the Sunday that Clancy was picked up on the streets of Toledo in a dazed condition.

Boyle, after his arrest, denied passing under an assumed name and that he had seen Mrs. Clancy in Toledo. He finally owned up and told her whereabouts. He claims to have left for Detroit at five o'clock on the Saturday morning in question. Had he before leaving seen Clancy?

The trouble with Boyle is that he has told too many stories to the officers that did not hang together. He at first asserted that he left Toledo Saturday evening, but he was seen on the streets early Sunday morning, and he then acknowledged that fact. It was during the twelve hours during which he at first claimed to be absent from Toledo that in all probability Clancy was slugged.

Sheriff Judson went from Toledo to Windsor and found Mrs. Edith Clancy. Mrs. Clancy had been shown the papers and been accused by the landlady of being Mrs. Frank Clancy but strongly denied it. She had kept up her denial until Wednesday when before the sheriff arrived she acknowledged to a reporter that she was Mrs. Clancy and told a pitiful story of her life. She succeeded in making quite an impression on the sheriff, who does not believe that she is implicated in her husband's death.

John Stevens has also been seen in Windsor and denies having seen Clancy since he left Kalamazoo. It seems that neither Stevens nor Mrs. Clancy was in Toledo at the time that Clancy was there.

How Mr. DeCou Won His Fellowship.

As showing how high were the honors attained by two of the graduates of Michigan University and how much credit is thereby reflected on the University the following from the New York Evening Post will prove of interest:

The two fellowships in classical archaeology offered for the year 1895-6 by the managing committee of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens have just been awarded. The successful applicants were Frank C. Babbitt, A. B. (1890) and Ph. D. (1895) at Harvard, and Herbert F. DeCou, A. B. (1888) and A. M. (1890) at the University of Michigan. Mr. DeCou was a student at the school at Athens in 88-92, and for the last three years has been an instructor in the University of Michigan. These fellowships, each of the value of $600, were awarded by a special committee, on the basis of such written evidence of fitness as the candidates were able to furnish. The showing made by the applicants was unexpectedly strong. This was gratifying, but it made the decision of the committee difficult. There were seventeen applicants, two of them women. These candidates had taken their first degree at thirteen different American colleges; four had received the degree of doctor of philosophy by examination six had studied abroad. Fifteen were teachers, five holding the rank of professor or assistant professor.

Twenty-four fellowships or scholarships had been held by them. Their studies had been carried on in twenty-one different colleges and universities, five in Germany included.

The applicants had previously been students at the school at Athens. All the applicants except four had done graduate work in some university of good reputation.

When a student at the school in 89-92, Mr. DeCou made an important discovery which furnishes another amusing instance of the disposition of the makers of books to draw on their predecessors for facts without careful verification. While making a careful study of the frieze of the choregic monument of Lysicrates, he discovered that the frieze would not square with the representations of it in books. The original frieze naturally seemed to him to have the greater authority. He traced the error back through seven different works by authors of reputation, published between 1825 and 1890, and discovered that its source was the original publication of Stuart and Revett, in which two of the sheets containing the drawings had been misplaced, thus reversing the proper order of the figures! This set the original composition sadly askew, but the learned authors of the books never twigged the blunder—one of them, indeed, especially commended the symmetry shown in the composition of this portion of the relief. The deductions which Mr. DeCou was himself able to draw from a correct knowledge of the relief are of great importance.

—New York Evening Post.

What the City Fathers are Doing.

The city offices Wednesday presented a lively scene, City Clerk Mills acting as secretary for three separate bodies, the board of public works, the lighting committee and the finance committee. All passed off very peaceably although occasionally sarcastic remarks were passed such as when Mr. Schuh said he understood the city charter to provide that all purchases of machinery, etc., should be made through the board of public works. Ald. Taylor tartly said they (the aldermen) had also read the charter and understood what their duties were. A lengthy discussion about housing the steam roller showed that the purchase of the machine is the commencement of the expenditure of a large sum of money. Ald. Taylor said he thought it would be advisable to lease or purchase a piece of land upon which to erect suitable buildings in which to place the stone crusher and steam road roller, etc. The building to have bins so arranged that the crushed stone could be loaded in to wagons without being shoveled. Mr. Schuh brought up the matter of street signs for Lawrence's addition. The street commissioner was directed to ascertain how many were needed and the cost. Mr. Schuh suggested that they be painted by William Herz for the same price as those formerly used.

The cost of the small piece of macadam laid in front of the engine house on East Huron street was discussed. Mr. Schuh claimed that it had cost over $200. An important step taken showing a changed of heart of the board of public works was the passing of a resolution by Mr. Bullis, that all flush tanks on lateral sewers be connected up as soon as in place and people along the line be granted permission to make connections with the sewer. Last year the board was strenuous that no connections should be made until the sewer was accepted.

City Treasurer Manly raised the important question, if the five per cent additional to be paid on unpaid taxes in the winter means at the rate of five per cent per year, or five per cent on the gross sum. Pres. Hisecock said five per cent on the gross sum had been collected last year. Treasurer Manly said good lawyers had expressed doubts as to its legality.

Inspector Ward was directed to investigate the store of J. T. Jacobs block and other stores as to the disposal of water into the sewer if being contrary to the rules. In the meantime the application of J. T. Sullivan was not acted upon.

The lighting committee agreed upon a report on the Michigan Electric Co.'s bid substantially the same as its former one that if the company could fulfill the conditions required its bid be accepted and it be given a five years contract.

A year ago the sidewalk was removed on West Huron street east of Rhode's lime house. Pedestrians have long been kicking about traveling through the mud. Mr. Rhode says it is the city's business to replace the walk. The public suffers through the neglect of somebody.

The Young Peoples Society of Bethlehem church will give an excursion to Detroit on Wednesday, August 21, to which everybody is cordially invited. The fare for the round trip will be 90 cents; children under twelve, 50 cents. Special train leaves Ann Arbor at 7:30 a. m. standard; returning train leaves Detroit at 7:30 p. m. standard. Tickets on sale at the following places: Wm. Illi, East Washington; J. M. Warner, meat market, south Main; Fred Shuall, at J. Koch's furniture store; Stinson & Son, State street; Wm. Lodholz, fifth ward, and at Michigan Central depot on the morning of departure.

The eighth annual commencement exercises of the Michigan Mining School will occur on Friday August 16, 1895. The address will be given by Hon. Washington Gardner, secretary of state. There are 32 graduates. The Michigan Mining School is the largest distinctive mining school in the country and under the able administration of Dr. Wads worth, has become a power in its line of educational work. Those who control the great mining interests of the Upper Peninsula have confidence in the school and the graduates it turns out, as is shown by their readiness to give them employment. Some years since the writer while on a visit of inspection to the school, also visited the mining center of that section and took some pains to learn the sentiment toward the institution. It was uniformly favorable.

Tuesday afternoon Deputy Sheriff Fred Huhn was called to the residence of Carl Poegel to restore the family order and peace which had been broken by a disturbance on the part of Mr. Poegel. The offender was found resting quietly up stairs. But immediately upon the approach of the officer, Mr. Poegel arose and gave him a most hearty greeting with a piece of moulding which took effect over officer Huhn's left eye, inflicting a deep gash, leaving it sideways. This was a simple means of diverting the officer's view and purpose but unfortunately for Mr. Poegel the other eye was still straight and with enough "foresight" to bring about his arrest and arrangement before Justice Gibson the next morning, on charge of assault and battery. Bail was given for Poegel's appearance August 28, the date set for his trial.

The farmers' annual basket picnic will be held at Whitmore Lake Saturday, August 24, 1895, and a right royal good time is expected. Among the attractions on the occasion will be that genial, good natured, whole souled, practical, horny-handed tiller of the soil, Ex-Senator Tom Palmer. The Argus is informed by the president of the association that in a letter the senator informs him that during college years he whiled away many a pleasant hour at Whitmore and that it will afford him great pleasure to again make a pilgrimage to this Mecca of former pleasures. Hon. Wm. A. Moore, of Detroit, Rev. Fr. Goldrick and Hon. Wm. Ball will also speak. Fine music will be rendered. After the speaking a general love feast will be indulged in. It will be a great day. Everybody should attend.

The parlors of the M. E. church are being decorated.

Bert Schumacher is putting a freight elevator in his hardware store.

There were about 100 examined for teachers certificates here yesterday.

Profs. Carhart and Patterson are editing a new book on Electrical Measurements.

The Pittsfield O. N. O. club will meet tomorrow evening at the residence of Mrs. Warehr.

Jacob Miller, a deaf mute and an old resident of this city, died at the county house last Friday, aged seventy-six years.

Mrs. Abram Abel, the mother of the late Eugene Abel, of the firm of Bach & Abel, died at her home in Fultonville, N. Y., last Sunday.

Jacob Ganzhorn built a big bonfire on his place last Saturday evening and in consequence was called before Justice Pond to answer for it.

Chris. Brenner has fitted up his new livery stable in fine style. With new and stylish horses and rigs, he is prepared to compete with the best of them.

William Fuchs was arrested Wednesday night, charged with beating his wife with a broom handle. He pleaded not guilty and Justice Gibson will try him in two weeks.

The Modern Woodmen broke into their own lodge room with a plank, breaking the front door. An officer had to be called to make peace between the tenants of the second floor and the Woodmen.

The Zion Lutheran church hold a mission festival next Sunday. The speakers at the morning service will be Prof. Emanuel Schmid, of Columbus, Ohio, and Rev. Paul Hein, of South Chicago. In the evening Rev. Clessler, of Bridgewater, will speak.

W. W. Whitmarsh, of Milan, who was in the city Tuesday evening, says that the corn crop in York is the best that they have had in years. Oats are also a heavy crop and the wheat is turning out so much better than expected that the farmers are feeling better. There wasn't much straw, but the wheat was there just the same.

Miss Elizabeth A. Cowan, of this city, was married at her home on Main street Tuesday to Edward E. Taylor, of Owosso, by Rev. Henry Tatlock. Miss Cowan has been a teacher in the schools here and Mr. Taylor graduated in the University in the class of 1893, and is teaching in Muskegon. The best wishes of many friends are extended to them.

About ten o'clock Saturday night a party of seven boys, in the latter part of their teens, tipped over and broke a cube of marble which was standing in front of Baumgartner's granite works. Mr. Baumgartner and "Doc" Collins soon ferreted out the guilty persons, but as yet the affair has not been settled, nor have the names of the offenders been made known. The misdeed, which was probably but the outcome of a mischievous intent, has lost all its humor for the parties involved. It spoiled all immediate sale and imposed upon the owner a great inconvenience and loss of time.

James Gerney and Wm. Wheeler were brought before Justice Pond this week on a charge of larceny of horse and buggy. Three o'clock last Friday morning they hired a livery rig of Wallace and said they intended to drive a few miles north of Ann Arbor and return at 6 a. m. They didn't return, however, but went on to Island Lake. Wallace followed and trumped their game with a bogus warrant issued at Whitmore Lake. They were lodged in the county jail and afterwards released on a writ of habeas corpus. A warrant, already made out for them, secured their arrest; and they are now out on bail awaiting their trial, which was adjourned to August 17.

Horse races, bicycle races on the track each day of the fair. In addition, the society has secured the Kemp combination, which consists of lady riders, four-horse chariot races, dog races, hurdle races, Welsh pony races, comic umbrella races, grand two horse standing race. Kemp sisters with high jumping ponies will give an exhibition every day. These children, although but seven and nine years of age, have created great sensations in both east and west with their ease and grace. The company is composed of ten people, all artists in their lines. They have twelve thorough bred horses, besides ponies, greyhounds, etc., and together promise the best exhibition ever seen in connection with a fair in Michigan.

The fair programme is now near completion and never was arranged with more attractions. The special premiums are better than ever before. The premiums have been contributed by manufacturers, merchants, newspaper men and farmers, and vary in value from one to one hundred and fifty dollars. In consideration for the specials furnished the society, in addition to giving a list of contributors, inserts a concise statement of their business, which any business man knows is the best possible advertisement, in the "Fair News," of which we shall issue

15,000 copies. No questionable advertisement enterprises are admitted. After the publication of the paper no one need blame the society that he did not secure space in it. Nearly all who gave special premiums last year and saw the benefit of them, have contributed again this year.

Street Car Jottings.

The Ann Arbor street railway will extend its lines shortly, a line being built from the Central depot connecting with the line of the road now there, running thence up State street and connecting with the present line on the corner of State and North University. When this line is completed Superintendent Berry expects to give the people down town a five minute service and the cars will simply be kept running around the loops without being obliged to wait for other cars. This will do away with the plan for a Kingsley street loop.

Superintendent Berry is a hustler and has done much to popularize the street car lines with the people. There is less and less kicking concerning the service, which everyone acknowledges has been vastly improved.

The ten tickets for a quarter after five o'clock has filled the open cars on warm evenings and if the company owned other open cars as they expect to before another summer they would be filled too.

The new tickets, six for a quarter, good at any time, differ greatly from the old green tickets, long in use. It is simply one ticket with six places to punch. All these tickets are numbered and every purchaser should put down the number of his ticket when he can find it, so that if the ticket is lost or stolen, the conductor may discover it when presented. With the last punch the conductor takes up the ticket. Only cash fares are now rung up.

If you look at your ticket after it has been punched several times you will discover that while one of the conductors has a diamond punch, another one has a little brown jug punch. The boys call him the jug puncher. None of the present conductors have been given a $20 gold piece for $1. but one of the motormen in the days before they had conductors had that good fortune, putting it in his pocket without looking at it and giving change for $1. He was a surprised motorman when he came to settle up at the barn, and hunted up the lady who gave it to him. The lady had no idea when she had parted with her $20 gold piece.

The Sunday evening trade is enormous. The children are numerous on that evening and as a rule seem greatly delighted. One little fellow said his papa wasn't going to Boston but then they rode around the loop three times a week and seemed to think that was as good as going to Boston. And who knows but what for real, healthful, cooling rest it is.

Business at the Ann Arbor Postoffice.

The receipts of the Ann Arbor postoffice from the sale of stamps, envelopes, postal cards and box rents for the year ending July 1, 1895, were $30,719.85, an increase of $2,153.55 over the corresponding receipts for the year ending July 1, 1894. This increase is in the sale of stamps, postals and envelopes, for owing to the extension of the free delivery system and to the improvements in the old free delivery district the box rents fell off from $719.40 for the year ending July 1, 1894, to $593.60 for the year ending July 1, 1895. The next year bids fair to mark a still further reduction in box rents, as the reduction in box rents did not begin until after the first quarter of the past year had elapsed and the box rent receipts for July of this year were $39.30 less than the receipts for July of last year.

There were only two months during the past year when the receipts were less than the corresponding months of the preceding year. These were the months of August 1894, when the decrease was $11.10 and the month of September, when the decrease was $25.78. Every other month shows a marked increase, aggregating for the year $2200.43. The months of the greatest increase were March, $690.02, February, $473.98; October, $333.95, and May, $304.88. The bulk of the increase has been in the past six months, when the sales increased $1,627.06 over the corresponding six months of 1894.

The month of August is the smallest month in the year at the postoffice, the receipts in 1894 being $1,482.20 during that month as against $3,110.38 receipts for the month of October. The three best months in the past year were March, October and January. The three best months of the preceding year were April, October and January.

As the postoffice receipts are a pretty good indication of general business about the city, the marked and encouraging increase of the past six months is an excellent indication of reviving times in business circles.

The Review is the mouthpiece of the men and women who know most about the great topics on which Americans require and desire to be informed from month to month. Its list of contributors forms a roll of the representative men and women of the age.

Subjects that concern the interest of

AMERICAN WOMEN receive constant and special attention. Among topics recently discussed are:

"Women Suffrage in Practice," "The Renaissance of Woman," "Woman in Politics," "The New Aspect of the Woman Question," and "The Modern Girl," by the author of "The Heavenly Twins"; "The Future of Marriage," "Evils of Early Marriages," "The Servant Girl of the Future," "The Financial Dependence of Women," "Trades-Unions for Women," "The Lack of Good Servants," "American Life and Physical Deterioration," "Good and Bad Mothers," "The Tyranny of the Kitchen," "The Amateur Nurse," Mark Twain's Defense of Harriet Shelly, etc., etc.

A NEW FEATURE FOR 1895.

The Review will publish in 12 chapters, beginning with the January number, the Personal History of the Second Empire.

a historical work of unsurpassed importance, which will throw a flood of new light upon the chequered career of Napoleon III., and the influences which led to the collapse of his Empire in the gigantic struggle with united Germany, under Wilhelm I. and his Iron Chancellor. It is as fascinating as a romance, being richly anecdotal and full of information drawn from sources hitherto inaccessible, presented in the graphic and vivacious style which "The Englishman in Paris," by the same author, has made familiar to thousands of readers.

A Queer Flower.

One of the vegetable marvels of July is the fraxinella, or dittany, an old-fashioned flowering plant, native in southern Europe and Asia and much cultivated in the gardens of our grandmothers. The plant has showy flowers—white, red and rosy—and an odor that belongs to the leaves as well as to the blossoms.

The plant, if visited at night with a lighted match, is suddenly enveloped with blue flames, as is the hand that bears the match. The flames are harmless and are caused by the combustion of a volatile oil that is secreted by the plant. This oil, in the form of vapor, impregnates the air immediately about the plant and is ignited at the approach of a light. The plant blooms abundantly, and the pyrotechnic display may be repeated night after night, especially if the condition of the atmosphere is favorable.

The plant obtains its name of dittany from the fact that it grows wild upon Mount Dictæ, in the island of Crete. It is by no means so well known now as it once was, since the gay flowers of old-fashioned country gardens have given place to more stately and less showy blossoms.—New York Sun.

Thousands of people are subject to bowel trouble in some of its various forms. Dr. Fowler's Ext. of Wild Strawberry is an unfailing remedy in all such cases.

An Indian Sea Serpent Legend.

The red men of the west have many curious legends concerning the rivers, lakes and mountains of that region, none more weird than that which is told concerning Rock lake, Washington. Since time out of memory the Indian tribes of that vicinity have believed the lake to be inhabited by a sea monster, which never grows old, and whose chief diet is Indian flesh. According to the legend, no Indian ever entered its waters and returned therefrom alive, no matter whether the rash act was committed by approaching its margin for a drink, for a plunge and a swim, or for a canoe ride upon its placid bosom. All of the Indians of the northwest know of the terrors of Rock lake, and each and every one would prefer death with a poisoned arrow rather than to touch its waters. The last Rock lake horror, according to the legend, was in 1858, when a whole band of noble red men were sent to the happy hunting grounds by the monster.—St. Louis Republic.

Who have both lost and captured you?
You will but love me; so
Since I too cannot let you go,
I can but love you too.

A TEMPTATION.

When Leander Clarke married Mabel Thorpe, he had no expectation of ever being a rich man, but as his affairs appear at the present time he is on the broad highway to future wealth. It all arose from the fact that he took time by the forelock, the only way poor mortals have of ever getting even with him of the scythe and hourglass.

Now, Mabel Thorpe did not expect her hero to swim the Hellespont of life with all his armor on, but she did demand from him, as she had a right to do, a high moral standard, for she had not married him until she had seen, as she believed, his whole past life laid open before her as a book. There is no time when a man is as weakly sentimental and as religious as when he is trying to live up to the standard of a pure young girl's ideal, and Leander became almost an angel.

There are very few of us capable of making human angels of ourselves. Good and evil are as persistently present in our moral nature as light and darkness are in our atmosphere, and one serves as the complement of the other. To banish night we use the light of science, to counteract wrong we invoke divine help, but so largely is our worldly nature in excess of our spiritual powers that we are constantly in danger of erring to be forgiven—in other words, sinning and repenting.

Mabel Thorpe believed in an inflexible uprightness. The command to do evil that good may come was to her a perverted text. She was not aware that there are sins of omission as well as of commission, and that her unrighteous condemnation of sinners and her severe judgments were in themselves a sinful nature. The self righteous are often harder to live with than the sinner.

Leander Clarke had been a good son, and he intended to be a good husband. He was both proud and fond of his wife, but certainly regretted that he could not give her all the luxuries that she could appreciate, not even the grand piano that her musical talent deserved. But he went to work with a will to make her happy and hoped in a few years to be able to add all other needful things.

Among the wedding presents of the young couple was one that far outshone all the rest—a superb set of diamonds sent by an uncle of Leander's who was near to death and gave the residue of a large estate in this extravagant present. Leander himself was genuinely sorry that such an undesirable gift had been made, but he argued that his wife was a sensible woman and would turn them into something more suitable to their condition in life—a piano, for instance, which was a necessity rather than a luxury. What was his surprise when his bride said:

"I never was so pleased in my life. Diamonds represent to me the crystallization of everything beautiful in art and nature. I never dreamed that I should possess such magnificence."

"But these have no associations," said her husband. "They are not heirlooms."

"They will be. All diamonds were new at some time. And are they not associated with the dear old man who gave them?"

The dear old man had been a terror in the family and had only given the diamonds to Leander's wife because he hated that nephew a little less than the others, whom he hoped to make horribly jealous and angry and had succeeded.

When Leander asked his wife to keep her diamonds in the bank, she promptly declined.

"But you surely will not wear them, dear?" he suggested.

"Why not?" she asked.

"It would injure our prospects and not be consistent with our position."

"They were a gift to me. Surely I have the right to do as I please with my own."

"The right, yes. But I thought my wife had more discretion. I did not know you cared for gewgaws, Mabel."

So the first cloud came on the horizon of their love, but Leander was good tempered and Mabel satisfied, and it disappeared. The truth was that Leander had expected a handsome sum of money from this very uncle, who was a bachelor and very old. But age had not mellowed an ugly disposition to thwart his relatives, and after raising the young man's hopes he took a malicious pleasure in disappointing them.

The young couple began life in a pretty furnished cottage on the modern plan of a chafing dish and hand painted china, and it worked like a charm. Mabel presided over the dainty cuisine, the butler's pantry, the parlor, and really did wonders. Leander fell in love with her over and over again. But for the diamonds they would have been as happy as larks.

Did they hear a sound at night—it was a burglar after those precious gems. They were afraid to leave the house alone lest thieves break in and steal, and one or the other of the two was compelled to be the hiding place of the jewels when they went out together. Mabel did not care to adorn herself with diamonds when she went to market or to church, but she could not listen to a sermon in peace if the gems were not about her. And somehow it did annoy her to carry concealed wealth like a brigand or a smuggler.

But when Leander had a chance to buy shares in the Little Catawba Lumber company and to make as much in three months as he would in a year by his clerkship Mabel would not listen to the suggestion that the bank would advance enough on the diamonds to enable him to make the investment.

Then Leander discovered that his wife could be a very obstinate woman. It was in vain that he laid before her the benefit that would result from a transient disposal of the gems. She replied, not without logic on her side, that the Little Catawba might be a failure, and then her precious securities would be forfeited. Leander, man fashion, grew angry, and after some hot words reached the penultimate of passion.

"I wish," he said in tones of invective, "that burglars would get the hateful stones. They might at least be of some use to them!"

It is said that curses, like chickens, come home to roost. After Leander had asked forgiveness for his rudeness and Mabel had sweetly extended the olive branch of conciliation he suggested that she be doubly careful of her cherished possessions.

"The town is full of burglars, and they know the people who have fine diamonds, and if they once set out to get them they'll succeed."

Mabel did not sleep with the diamonds in the same room. Womanlike, she thought if she secreted them in some place where they would never be detected they would be safe. Neither the ash barrel nor the ragbag entered into her calculations, but places just as inconsistent did.

One night there was a crash in the room below. Mabel shook her sleeping husband and whispered in his ear: "Burglars! Get your revolver and go down stairs. The diamonds are in the bottom of the clock."

Leander was startled and confused, but as the noise continued he hurried on his clothes, and taking his revolver ran softly down the stairs. Mabel remained where she was, shivering with fear.

There was a fearful commotion below, the noise of falling furniture, opening and closing of windows and the rapid firing of the revolver after some flying robber. Then regard for her husband's life compelled Mabel to hurry to his assistance. She found him lying on the floor, grasping his revolver.

She did not faint nor shriek, but, kneeling beside him, bathed his face and besought him to speak to her.

"Where am I?" he asked feebly as he tried to raise himself. "Are the diamonds safe?"

"Never mind the diamonds," said his wife. "Are you mortally wounded anywhere?"

"I don't know," answered Leander feebly, and to her credit be it recorded, Mrs. Leander assisted her husband to a couch and sent off, or rather called for, assistance before she even thought of her diamonds.

Then the open door of the clock told the whole story. The diamonds were gone, root and branch! And they were the only things stolen.

If Leander had been surprised at the manner of his wife on receiving the jewels, he was astonished at the calm indifference with which she parted from them. She allowed the usual course to be taken to recover the thief or thieves to justice, but when no results followed she said she was glad of it; that the gems had been like an evil eye to them, and for her part she never wanted to hear of them again.

"I wonder," she said, "that I did not see it in that light before. I will never keep anything in my house again to tempt the cupidity of the wicked or unfortunate. To that extent am I my brother's keeper."

But the effect upon her husband was entirely different. Either he caught cold on that night of the burglary or his nervous system received a shock, for he was almost ill from the effects of his tussle with the burglar. And he could not endure to have the subject mentioned before him. Not even the success of the "Little Catawba," in which a friend had invested for him, gave him the peace and rest he craved.

A little incident that happened at that time did, however, help to restore him to his normal condition. His wife received a small package, accompanied by a soiled and dilapidated note, which, upon being opened, read:

HONOR MADAM—I get no sleep since I stole your diamonds; no yore lady am I am aretch if i give them up pra fur me.

an unnone friend.

And in the package Mabel found her diamonds, exactly as she had last seen them.

She was pleased—where is the woman who would not have been?—and she at once showed her confidence in her husband by placing the gems in his hands for safe keeping in the bank.

"I wish I had taken your advice earlier," she said gracefully. "It would have saved us so much trouble."

Leander murmured something about all being well that ends well and at noon brought her a certificate of deposit.

There we leave them on the way to fortune and happiness if—if Leander's conscience does not upset the whole scheme. He would give a great deal to know, what no clairvoyant could tell him, how much or how little Mabel has discovered. My own opinion is that she saw through it from the first and holds herself equally guilty as accessory after the crime, and with that sweet fickleness which even an upright woman employs she will make herself a loving accomplice, for it is a foregone conclusion that Leander Clarke was his own burglar.—Detroit Free Press.

Dress Made of Cigar Ribbons.

Mme. Ida Lane Ney of Vienna has discovered a new use for cigar ribbons. For the past five years she has collected the narrow, yellow bits of silk used in tying cigars together, and to each of these she has "joined" a strip of black dress silk of equal length and width. Lately she found that the piece of goods was large enough to make a dress, and acted accordingly. There are 3,000 cigar ribbons in the dress.

SINFUL HABITS IN YOUTH

LATER EXCESSES IN MANHOOD

MAKE NERVOUS, DISEASED MEN

THE RESULT of ignorance and folly in youth, overexertion of mind and body induced by lust and exposure are constantly wrecking the lives and future happiness of thousands of promising young men. Some fade and wither at an early age, at the blossom of manhood, while others are forced to drag out a weary, fruitless and melancholy existence. Others reach matrimony but find no solace or comfort there. The victims are found in all stations of life.—The farm, the office, the workshop, the pulpit, the trades and the professions.

WE WANT TO TELL YOU

Why Your Back is Lame—Why it Aches and Pains, and How to Cure it.

Do you know what it is to have a back that is never free from aches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a burden? What have you done for it? And does it still keep you from the happiness that perfect health brings to all? We know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point: there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says:—

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostration while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe bilious attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. It is almost impossible to describe the pain which so often lamed me. I have been so lame that to stand up after I had been sitting down required a great exertion. Walking was at times an impossibility, even at night I did not rest, being forced to get up during the night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and wondered if they could make an almost lame man well. I got some, and soon after taking them began to feel their good effects. I used them for some time, my lameness all left me and I have not felt it since. Doan's Kidney Pills have done me an inestimable amount of good."

A MAY MADRIGAL.

Birds are busy on the bough;
Listen how they sing!
All the world is merry now
In the arms of spring.
Twinkling blossoms on the spray,
Trembling stars above,
How they gladden, hearing May
Whisper softly, Love!

Fickle April gone at last;
Doubt with her has flown.
May and Hope returned and fast
Calling to their own.
In her garden bower the rose
Slips a velvet glove;
Some one calls her—well she knows
'Tis the voice of Love!

On the vine the gentle gales
Kiss the buds awake.
Drowsy violets in the vales
All their dreams forsake.
Back on shining pinions fleet
Flies her faithful dove
With May's message, strange and sweet,
With your message, Love.

A WIDOW'S LOVE.

It was "steamer day" at Sitka, and amid all the joys stir and excitement that the monthly boat brought was one forlorn, unhappy man. Tom Douglas watched his friends as they eagerly opened their letters and listened with assumed interest to the bits of news they were anxious to share, for at Sitka the population throngs to the wharf when the steamer's whistle is heard and waits the coming of the ship and the distribution of the mails. The people crowd into the tiny postoffice on the dock and watch impatiently for the longed for home letters.

But Tom's home letter was not a comfort to him. "Well, she is really coming," he thought, "a month from today, if the steamer is on time. I will be a married man; worse luck. How can I ever tell Natalia, dear little girl! I wouldn't willingly hurt her tender feelings for $1,000,000, as hard up as I am." And Tom whistled ruefully.

Tom Douglas was a naval officer and before being stationed at Sitka he had been on duty a winter in Washington, where he plunged into society with that gay abandon that only a sailor knows, for after three years at sea a young fellow is quite ready for the rush and whirl of the gay capital. All houses were open to the handsome lieutenant, but there was one where he was especially welcome. The hostess was a pretty widow of some 26 or 27 years of age. Her husband, who had died soon after their marriage, seemed not to have had a very strong hold on her affections, for after mourning him decorously for a year she blossomed into the gayest of the gay, and her house became a center for the young officers who had been the friends of her husband.

It was there that Tom spent most of his time. He dropped in during the morning and discussed the newest gossip or the latest magazines and came in for a cup of tea in the afternoon and remained till her cozy parlor was empty save for himself and her.

"Are you going to the assembly tonight?" he would ask.

"Will you be there, Tom?" Mrs. Deering had such a good fellowship way of using her friends' first names.

"Yes, I presume so."

"Well, then, I am going," the little widow would reply.

And that was the way the winter passed, Tom running in at all hours, privileged to smoke or read, to talk or listen, the most indulgent of all her callers. When his orders came for his immediate removal to Alaska, he put the document in his pocket and went as usual to the cheery home of Mrs. Deering. He told her the news and was really surprised and flattered by her reception of it. She took both his hands in hers, and the tears gathered in her bright eyes.

"Oh, Tom," she said, "I hate to have you go."

Now, it never occurred to Lieutenant Douglas before, but at this moment the idea did come to him that he was in love with the widow. He drew her to him and kissed away her tears, and before he knew it he was engaged to Alice Deering.

He left soon after arranging to have Alice join him later in the summer, but owing to the loss of a distant relative, the heir of whose modest estate she was, her coming had been greatly delayed. It was now more than a year since Tom and she had parted in Washington. In the meantime Tom had whiled away his leisure hours in the somewhat narrow circle of Sitka society, but in that narrow bound he had found a fair Russian flower that he knew bloomed for him. Though Tom had not made love to Natalia—he was too honorable for that—they had been together constantly, and each knew instinctively what was in the other's heart.

"I believe I'll go and tell Natalia all," Tom continued to muse, "right now, for of course as a gentleman and officer I am bound to keep my word, and my word is given to marry Alice—hang it! I wish I had never been born. She, too, poor girl, may discover that my love has somewhat cooled. If it ever was love, it never was the same feeling I have for dear little Natalia, bless her loving heart."

So Tom went to Natalia and told her that he was engaged, and that another month would see him married.

Her delicate face whitened, but controlling herself she said:

"I congratulate you, Mr. Douglas." Then, bursting into tears, she turned away. The sight of her tears was too much for Tom. Embracing her tenderly, he said: "I love you, Natalia, darling. Oh, that I had met you first! My fondness for Alice was but a fleeting thing, and my love for you will last forever."

Pressing warm kisses on her lips, he held her close.

"Leave me, Tom. It is right for you to keep your word, but you should have told me of your engagement before. We had best part now. Goodby."

"But can't I come to see you, Natalia, as usual?"

"Why, certainly not, Mr. Douglas

It would only be painful, for we can never, from this time forward, be anything but the most formal of friends."

Tom was touched by the simple dignity of the young Russian girl, whose quiet life had been spent by the seashore under the shadow of the mountains, far from the noise of city or town, so he bowed to her will. Their parting was a heartbreaking one to both.

"Natalia, I can't bear to leave you. I must have you, dearest."

"There, go now. This is only foolish."

"Well, then, let me kiss you for the last time, darling," pleaded Tom.

Natalia put up her little tear stained face, and Tom silently kissed her and went away.

That month passed only too quickly for poor Tom, who looked with dread toward the coming of the steamer. He studiously avoided Natalia, denying himself the regular afternoon walk to the Indian river, which is the event of the day to all the white people at Sitka. He kept close to his rooms when not on board ship, cursing the mistake of his life which was so soon to make an unwilling bridegroom of him.

To Natalia, whose soft, brown eyes were red with weeping, life seemed a dreary blank now that the daily visits of Tom had ceased. There appeared in her mental horizon nothing for which to live. She wondered how she had existed before he came to Sitka. But then she had been busy with her lessons, and now, in the idea of her old-fashioned father, her simple education was complete, and it was time for her to marry one of the Russian lads who sought her hand.

The next "steamer day" Tom Douglas was seen rushing madly to Natalia's home. The neighbors, who of course had noted his long absence, were greatly surprised.

"Natalia, Natalia," he cried as soon as she came into the quaint drawing room to receive him. "I've come to ask you to be my wife. Dearest, say yes at once."

"Why, Tom, are you crazy? What has become of Alice?"

"Well, by George, Natalia, she is married! Just think of it—married! And I am the happiest man on earth. A pardoned convict's feelings of relief are not to be compared to mine. You see, soon after she left Washington she met an old sweetheart whom she had cast off to marry Mr. Deering, whose position and prospects seemed better. In the meantime this fellow had made a fortune, and as he was on his way to Alaska for a pleasure trip they decided to make it also a wedding trip and break the news to me in person. Rather awkward, you might think, but I congratulated them with all my heart and thanked my stars for my freedom. Come, little girl, put on your hat, and I'll take you down to the steamer to see the bride, and I'll introduce to her my fiancée, because you say, 'Yes,' don't you, dear?"

"I suppose so, Tom, but it's all so sudden. Shall I wear my leghorn hat?" —St. Louis Republic.

Scandinavian Wood Pulp.

The amount of wood pulp now produced in Scandinavia is reported to be enormous, and besides the many wood pulp mills there are a large number of native cellulose and sulphite works, the former supplying more than one-half the wood pulp production. Next to these come the sulphite mills, the wood pulp mills exporting barely half their production, or considerably less in quantity than the sulphite and cellulose. Almost all the paper exported from Sweden is said to be made from wood pulp. A recently published account of this industry shows a total of some 95 establishments, and for 55 of these the aggregate power, usually water, is reported to equal about 18,000 horsepower. The most important of these are thus enumerated: Those of Orton, Tralibatt, 2,450 horsepower; that of Munkidal, Uddevalla, 1,250 horsepower; with 10 horizontal and 1 vertical mill, and Tossfors, Ottebøl, 900 horsepower, with 17 horizontal mills. There are 12 patron cellulose works and 17 sulphite establishments.—New York Sun.

What Makes Niagara Falls' Power?

What makes Niagara falls' power possible is the fact that Lake Superior, Lake Michigan, Lake Huron and Lake Erie, with a combined area of 90,000 square miles, representing the reservoirs of some 250,000 square miles of watershed, are situated 600 feet above the sea level. The great volume of water falling over the vast territory flows on its natural course to the Atlantic ocean with but a slight descent, until it is brought into the narrow Niagara river, when, in the rapids just above the falls, it declines 55 feet and then, with a single plunge, drops into the abyss, 165 feet below. Eminent engineers have computed that 275,000 cubic feet of water pass over the falls every second, representing in theoretical energy over 6,000,000 horsepower.—Cassier's Magazine.

Improving on Nature.

"Horror!" exclaimed the beautiful society woman. "Do you mean to try to sell me that picture as an artistic presentation of a group of horses?"

The great artist paused a moment bewildered. Then a light broke in upon him, and with a few rapid strokes he painted out all the long, graceful tails on the horses and substituted for each a docked tuft that stuck out straight like a pump handle.

"Ah," said the society woman, clapping her hands with pleasure, "now that is a picture worth having."—Chicago Record.

Mme. Mara.

Mme. Mara, the noted songstress, had dark, irregular features, but with such a play of expression when she sang that they seemed to glow. She did not at first appear on the stage favorably impress an audience, on account of her lameness, but when she began to sing everything else was forgotten.

Royalty on the Rails.

It may not be generally known that a telegraphist always travels by "royal trains." In case of any mishap a ladder is placed against the nearest telegraph post and a wire tied or connected with an instrument which the telegraph clerk works while sitting on the bank.

By this means word can be at once sent to the nearest railway station, giving instructions that assistance must be sent at once to such and such a spot.

When a train with the sovereign on board is traveling, all the men in responsible positions all along the line are forewarned. Once on the Brighton line a trial was made. The royal train was stopped, and the telegraphist sent word in the way just described. The result was most satisfactory, and the royal personage was well pleased at the promptitude with which a relief party arrived from a place some miles distant.—Pearson's Weekly.

R. C. Joiner, Allen P. O., Hillsdale Co., Mich., says: "Nothing gave my rheumatism such quick relief as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil."

Molly Maguire Warnings.

President Andrews, in a Scribner historical paper, gives the following examples of the Molly Maguire warnings. One admonition ran:

"Now men I have wanted ye before and I will want ye no more—but I will grintee ye the will be the report of the revolver."

A rude drawing of a revolver was subjoined as the author's sign manual.

Others were: "Any blackleg that takes a Union Man's job while he is standing for his rights will have a hard road to travel and if he don't he will have to suffer the consequences."

This "Notice" was followed by a picture of a dead man in his coffin and signed "Beacher and Tilton."

At Loon Summit, March 31, 1875, was posted the following: "Mr. Blacklegs if you don't leave in 2 days time you meet your doom there will be an open war—imateately."

Glads Tidings to Asthma Sufferers.

Lawson Elridge, of Birmingham, Ill., states he was cured of chronic asthma of long standing by Foley's Honey and Tar. It gives positive relief in all cases of asthma so that this disease, when to completely cured, is robbed of all its terrors by this great remedy. No sufferer should be without it. 50c. Take no substitute. A. E. Mummery, Druggist.

Estate of Adelaide Anthony.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Washtenaw, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Washtenaw, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Ann Arbor, on Monday, the 13th day of August, 1895, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Present, J. Willard Babbitt, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Adelaide Anthony, deceased.

Warren Kimble, the administrator of said estate, comes into court and represents that he is now prepared to render his final account as such administrator.

Thereupon it is ordered that Tuesday, the 13th day of September next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for examining and allowing such account, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, be required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the city of Ann Arbor, in said County, and show cause, if any there be, why the said account should not be allowed.

And it is further ordered that said Administrator give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said account, and of the time and place for the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Ann Arbor Argus, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county, two successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

J. WILLARD BABBITT, Judge of Probate.

TWO LIVES FOR ONE

Father and Son Hangs on the Same Tree by a Mob.

SHERIFF KNEW WHAT WAS COMING,

But Took No Efficient Measures to Uphold the "Majesty of the Law"—Triple Tragedy at Chicago—Two Women and a Mercantile Shot—Beautiful Illustration of Our Advanced Civilization Preparing in Missouri—Criminal Record.

ELLENBURG, Wash., Aug. 15.—Samuel Vinson and his son Charles were lynched here for the murder during a drunken row on Sunday of Mike Kehlopp, a saloon-keeper. The ringing of fire bells was the signal for the crowd to assemble, and within three minutes a mob was battering down the doors of the county jail. It took an hour and a half to overpower the guards and force an entrance to the jail. The victims were walked three blocks to a tree. The elder Vinson was soon strung up. Then some one said to Charles Vinson: "Your pa is up there; go and see him." The two men were hanged to the same limb, their faces six inches apart.

Sheriff Knew What Was Coming. The bodies were allowed to hang after the mob dispersed. The sheriff was aware of the plan to lynch the Vinsons, and although he had extra deputies on duty at the jail no violent measures were taken against the mob. Charles Vinson conspired with others to hold up a Northern Pacific train last April. He informed on his confederates, who were caught at their rendezvous. He had previously served a term in the state prison.

WORK OF A CHICAGO DASTARD.

Kills a Woman Because She Will Not Live with Him.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Frank Sweet, janitor, fatally shot Mrs. Alice Burr last night, slightly wounded Mrs. J. B. Nichols, and then put a bullet through his own brain. Sweet was the brother-in-law of Mrs. Burr, and desired her to come and live with him. She had left her husband on a former occasion, and had announced her intention of going back to him. Sweet combated her resolution and last night visited her house for the purpose of getting her to leave her husband.

She refused and he at once shot her through the neck. Mrs. Nichols was struck by a bullet which Sweet intended for the husband of the woman he had fatally shot. Sweet was janitor of the Champlain building, one of the finest office buildings in Chicago.

BACK INTO THE MIDDLE AGES.

An Infamy That Some "Best Citizens" of Missouri Are Preparing.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15.—Emmet Divers, the negro who assaulted and murdered a woman in Fulton, Mo., has been sent to that place from St. Louis. Reports sent in to the Republic are to the effect that every saloon in Fulton is closed by order of the mayor, and will remain closed until after it is known whether or not Divers will be taken back there. All the roads leading into Fulton are guarded by squads of men, and all trains passing through the town are watched and searched.

All business in Fulton is at a standstill, and nearly all the men are armed, waiting and more than willing to mob the negro. If Divers is taken in the day time he will be held until night, tied in a cabin and the torch applied. This has been agreed upon.

Authorities Afraid to Do Their Duty.

COMO, Colo., Aug. 15.—Bill Gibson, who shot and killed Marshal Shea at Victor, and his brother Patrick, whom he freed from custody, are in Fair Play and offer to surrender on condition that they shall not be taken to Victor, where they say they would be hanged without a hearing. The Fair Play authorities are afraid to attempt to arrest them.

He Is Worse Than a Horse Thief.

ELYRIA, O., Aug. 15.—William J. Clark, in jail here as an alleged horse thief, has been recognized by Laura May Hershey, aged 12, as George W. Vanweike, who employed her as a companion for his wife in Massillon. Before arriving there he criminally assaulted her and frightened her into silence, and then soon after abandoned her.

Had to Have Some Sort of Mob.

LARUE, O., Aug. 15.—Nick Tyler and his son, Nick, Jr., did not wash often enough to suit their neighbors, who took father and son to the Scioto river and gave them an old fashioned scrubbing. The two Nicks fought lustily without success. They have brought suit charging assault and battery.

Ten-Year-Old Boy Commits Murder.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 15.—As a result of a quarrel Charles Jackson, a colored boy 10 years old, wounded George Quimby, also colored and the same age, over the head with a sharp-edged brick. Quimby's skull was fractured and he will die.

Shot Dead at a Campmeeting.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 15.—Daniel Farlow, a well-to-do resident of Pittsfield, Md., was shot dead in campmeeting at Meldon's last evening by Gardner Calloway. He claimed that Farlow had insulted his mother.

Smashed the Ten-Mile Record.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The most notable achievement of the day at the Manhattan Beach cycling events was the smashing of the record in the ten-mile match race between Harry Maddox, holder of the record of 21:30 3-5, and Titus Maddox dropped out before the end of the second mile and Titus cut out the pace for the pacers, doing the ten miles in 20:58 3-5.

Jennie Was too Sharp for Them.

PERRY, O. T., Aug. 15.—Deputy Marshals have arrested the notorious Jennie Mot calfest of here, but she stole an officer's horse and fled. She was formerly Jennie Stephens, and is a cousin to Bill Dalton, and not an officer in the territory is a better shot than she. Although only 12 years old she is said to have sold more whiskey to Indians than the oldest of fender.

Frank Annis Declared Not Guilty.

FLINT, Mich., Aug. 15.—After a seven days' trial the jury in the case of Frank Annis, accused of causing his wife's death by setting fire to their home while she was asleep, has rendered a verdict of not guilty.

OFFERS TO ASSASSINATE CAMPOS.

Francesco Corallo, a Mexican, Wants to Make Himself a Name.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Francesco Corallo, a Mexican, called upon M. De Quesada, at the revolutionary headquarters, and offered his services as a fighter. Quesada told him that it was against the law to recruit men in the United States, and declined to deal with him. To the reporters Corallo said: "I speak Castilian, and I can put on the uniform and pass as a Spanish soldier. In that disguise I will go to Campos' tent and kill him. Of course I shall be killed by his guards, but I do not fear death, anyhow."

Miners Strike Without Warning.

FLORENCE, Wis., Aug. 15.—The miners at the Badger mine struck without warning and as yet have not made known their wants. Manager Davidson says his company is now paying better wages than any mine on the range, and the strike is a great surprise to him. He says he will make no concessions or overtures to have them return. If the men return voluntarily mining will be resumed, otherwise the mine will be closed until next spring. About 400 men were employed.

Syndicate Keeps Up the Reserve.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—United States Treasurer Morgan received a telegram from Assistant Treasurer Jordan at New York stating that the bond syndicate had deposited $1,050,000 in gold in exchange for legal tenders, and later in the day another telegram was received stating that $1,150,000 in gold had been withdrawn for export to Europe. This leaves the gold reserve at the close of business $102,431,061.

Purchases a Right-of-Way.

SAULT STE MARIE, Mich., Aug. 15.—An eastern syndicate represented by F. H. Clergue has purchased outright the right-of-way of the old St. Mary's Falls Water Power company which, after expending $250,000 on the canal seven years ago stopped work on account of lack of funds. Later the canal was sold under mortgage foreclosure and the last sale was made by the mortgagees. The amount paid was $70,000.

May Not Have to Go to the Pen.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 15.—A Pierre, S. D., special to The Journal says: The attorneys of W. W. Taylor are jubilant in the belief that their client will not even begin to serve out the five-year sentence imposed on him by Judge Coffey. They will apply to the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that two years is the longest sentence permissible under the statute invoked by the lower court.

What Detroit Thought of the Wild West.

Pawnee Bill's Wild West, which exhibits here next Thursday, exhibited in Detroit recently. The Detroit Free Press of August 1 said of it:

Pawnee Bill's historical wild west show, Indian museum and Mexican hippodrome, an imposing and varied aggregation, opened yesterday on the circus grounds out Grand River avenue. Extremely large audiences greeted both afternoon and evening performances hundreds of people being turned away, especially in the evening, when the seats were all filled half an hour before the curtain arose on the opening acts of frontier life. The spectators found an abundance with which to satisfy themselves, and the wild western and Mexican features were generally applauded with shouts of approval. That the interest manifested was of the most intense order was in evidence from the fact that whenever any one arose and obstructed the vision of the occupants of the grand stand, yells and shouts rent the air from the demonstrative spectators. Those who were turned away expressed disappointment, as more reserved tickets were sold by the management than there was room for.

The features of the entertainment were so numerous that it is a task in itself to refer to them all. In the introduction the people were made acquainted with Senor Antonio, a Mexican leader, a troupe of Mexican vaqueros, George Elser, fancy and trick cowboy rider, a band of cowboys, Standing Bear, chief of the Sioux Indians, a tribe of Sioux warriors, Grey Eagle, chief of the Mahaje Indians, a tribe of Mahaje braves, Capt. A. G. Shaw, Indian agent and interpreter, a group of western lady riders, Miss May Little, champion lady horseback shot, and Maj. George W. Lillie, Pawnee Bill, white chief of the Pawnees and late leader of the Oklahoma boomers.

This interesting and numerous troupe of performers appeared in a programme that was very well conceived, holding the attention of the audience to the end. The difficult rifle practice by Pawnee Bill made a favorable impression. May Little was not so well received, it being claimed that her horse was accountable for her poor shooting. The Mahaje cremation was followed by an exhibition of lassoing and riding wild Texas steers. The old act of the pony express carrying the United States mail and being attacked by Indians was again given, but with a vim that added new zest to this feature of the entertainment. A true representation of the Deadwood stage coach robbery made a great hit. The cowboys, while riding at full speed, picked up all kinds of objects from the ground amid the enthusiasm of the multitude, and the score of other acts were heartily received, for they were novel, strong and fairly illustrative of the life in the west and in Mexico.
