SYNOPSIS

Act I

Cantankerous old Dr. Bartolo plans to marry his rich and beautiful ward, Rosina, but Count Almaviva, a dashing Grandee of Spain, has similar ideas. He is serenading her under an assumed name, Lindoro, so that she won't be influenced by either his reputation or his high rank. At this point, Figaro, the local barber and bon vivant, happens by and soon informs the Count that he has an entree into the Bartolo household and a scheme for introducing Rosina to him. And all of this can be had for the asking and a generous reward.
ACT II

Now inside, Figaro implements his plan. He tells Rosina that her serenader is his cousin who is passionately in love with her. When Rosina gives Figaro a note for his ‘cousin,’ Dr. Bartolo becomes suspicious of the goings-on and seeks the advice of the music master, befuddled old Don Basilio. The master says that a scandal will quickly get rid of the suitor, but Bartolo prefers his original idea of a speedy marriage. Meanwhile, the Count, still trying to gain access to the house, has disguised himself as a drunken soldier and forces his way in. The uproar is so great that the police arrive and place Count Almaviva under arrest. When he privately reveals his identity to the officer, he is immediately released with apologies.

ACT III

Almaviva now returns to the house disguised as a replacement for the music master Don Basilio, who, he claims, is sick. Under the pretense of a music lesson, he and Rosina have their first chance to talk together. Don Basilio appears in perfect health, whereupon the lovers, at first a little disconcerted, convince him with the aid of money that he is really ill. Basilio leaves. Figaro offers to shave Bartolo so that the lovers can elope, but the deception soon becomes clear. The Doctor summons a notary to draw up his marriage contract to Rosina, but Figaro manages to persuade the notary to marry her to the Count instead. Bartolo orders the arrest of the Count but is too late as the marriage has already taken place. He decides to accept his fate philosophically, particularly since Almaviva does not want Rosina’s considerable dowry.
